distribution systems have become commonplace for disseminating information to users. For example, online stores are available on the Internet that sell a variety of different products and services to users who browse the available online products and services. Some online stores offer users the option to pay for purchases online using credit cards or other payment methods. Online stores may also offer products or services that are available for free, or for a limited time, to users. In some cases, users may obtain incentives in exchange for paying for products or performing some other function. For example, online stores may offer a promotional incentive, such as a discount or free product, to a user when the user makes a purchase or performs some other action. These incentives may be used to entice new users to make online purchases or perform some other action. Some incentives may be provided by a merchant or by a payment provider, such as a credit card company or other financial institution. For example, a merchant may provide an incentive to a customer who makes a purchase. A payment provider may provide an incentive to a customer who performs some other action, such as signing up for a service or paying for an online purchase. For example, when a customer pays for an online purchase with a credit card, the credit card provider may provide the customer with an incentive. Such 82157476af
